

MEASURES FOR ABOLITION OF PAROLE BOARD

Bill Passes House Without Opposition, But Partisan Feeling Develops in Senate.
Adverse Report on Budget.
JACKSON, Miss., March 16. (Sp.)—An executive veto is in prospect for the bill, passed by the House Tuesday afternoon, abolishing the state board of pardons and transferring the duties of that body to the prison board of parole.

The bill met with no opposition in the House, but the debate in the Senate yesterday developed some partisan feeling, and the measure was postponed to the 17th in order to give the Senate time to consider it.

In the event of a veto, it is expected that an effort will be made to pass the bill in spite of executive opposition, and a close fight will take place in the Senate for the bill to pass by a rather small majority.

This measure is the third step in prison reform, the Senate on Tuesday having passed the bill providing for the reorganization of the prison system, and the establishment of the parole board.

A bill also pending in the Senate, framed by Mr. Stone, providing for the reorganization of the state department of corrections, and providing that the employees shall be named by the superintendent, with the consent and approval of the prison board.

Budget Not in Favor

The House committee on ways and means today adversely reported the budget bill, passed by the Senate Tuesday, providing for the establishment of the budget system for handling the state's finances.

The measure would create a special commission to meet in Jackson several months ahead of each legislative session and make recommendations showing the financial demands of the various departments. The House committee on ways and means today reported the measure to the House, and it is expected that it will pass there.
